Presentation – Inclusive	• It was noted that anti-oppressive education is focused on removing barriers so that Diversity Learning	a "poor, queer, trans, differently abled women" feels free because until that
	<ul> <li>She is working on a culturally responsive pedagogy project in conjunction with the</li> </ul>
	Ministry of Education that will initially be delivered at 2 elementary schools and 1 secondary school
	• She is working on a demographic data pilot project; an identity-based survey will be created so they can analyze whether identifiers (such as ethnicity, race, religion, gender, etc.) have an effect on student success within our Board <ul> <li>She is working with Chatham-Kent to deliver training on systematic racism so that their Executive Committee could consider whiteness and the impact that</li> </ul> whiteness has on others

	Kent; she noted that most of our knowledge is euro-centric, which means that white men have long been considered the thought and business leaders and that's no longer today's reality • Candice said she is currently writing Policies for the Board around persons that identify as trans-gender, and regarding use of the 'n'-word in schools; she noted there's an increase in hate speech and related actions so she's trying to teach students that 'words matter' <ul> <li>Angie Barrese commented on the fact that sometimes people use language that's</li> </ul> not-inclusive; Candice agreed and noted the importance of educating people about the history of the words they're using so they can think critically about word
